Organic wine from the high desert of Mexico, grown at 2,000 metres on land where nobody knew what would grow.

THE STORY IN 150 WORDS

Dos Búhos is a family winery at 6,600 feet in the high desert of central Mexico — three hours north of Mexico City, and nothing like Baja.

Higinio and Diane Maycotte planted the first vines in 2006 at the foot of the dormant volcano Palo Huérfano, on land the family had already farmed organically for decades: pears, peaches, vegetables. Nobody could tell them what would grow at that altitude, so they planted twelve varieties and let the land decide.

Twenty vintages later the answers are in the bottle: an Aglianico that keeps its acid through long, cold nights; a Chenin Blanc with limestone tension; an orange wine from Moscato Giallo. Certified organic by Oregon Tilth since 2014 and fermented with native yeasts in amphora and neutral oak, the wines are poured at Pujol, Quintonil, Nobu and Rosewood and imported to the United States. Four generations work the land. The motto: better wines for a better world.

SHORT VERSION

A family winery at 6,600 feet in central Mexico, organic since before the vines, making Aglianico, Chenin Blanc and orange wine at the foot of a sleeping volcano. Poured at Pujol and Quintonil; imported to the US.

Harvest is by hand, at dawn, before the heat.

Diane Maycotte, winemaker, with the amphorae.

THE LONGER STORY

Four generations, one land

The land has been in the family for more than sixty years. A great-grandfather farmed it, grandparents dreamed on it, Higinio and Diane planted the vines in 2006, and their children now walk the rows with children of their own. Every harvest continues a family story that began long before the first bottle.

Where nature leads

The vineyard has always been organic: no synthetic chemicals, ever. It is certified by Oregon Tilth to USDA organic standards and farmed for biodiversity. The owls the winery is named for are not just a symbol; they are part of the living ecosystem in the fields. Twelve varieties went in as a trial in 2006; today the vineyard grows eighteen.

In the cellar

Minimal intervention: native yeasts only, gentle filtration, patient ageing. When the grapes are grown right, the wine needs time and attention more than help.

A gathering place

Dos Búhos is also a restaurant, a wine garden and a place for events, from small weddings to charity dinners. The family works with local artists, musicians, craftspeople, chefs and educators, and gives back to San Miguel quietly and consistently.

Art among the vines

Work by local artists hangs in the tasting room and appears on the labels. In the historic chapel, Contemplo presents immersive video art, and an artist residency brings creators from around the world to live and work among the vines.

COMMUNITY AND THE CAUSES WE SUPPORT

“The world doesn’t need more wine. It needs a better world.”

That line is the reason the motto is better wines for a better world. From the start, Dos Búhos has been a gathering place for San Miguel as much as a winery: charity dinners and benefit events, open doors for local artists, musicians, chefs and educators, and a habit of giving back that the family keeps quiet and steady.

Over the years that has meant working with organizations the family admires: Feed the Hungry, the Audubon Society, Jóvenes Adelante, Casa Hogar San Miguel, Caminos de Agua, Cruz Roja, Patronato Pro Niños, Academia Internacional, Mano Amiga and Casita Linda.

At Contemplo, 15% of every ticket to En la Oscuridad, a tasting in complete darkness, goes to a Guanajuato association that supports people with visual disabilities.

CONTEMPLO: ART IN THE CHAPEL

Walk past the vines to the estate's old chapel and the lights go down.

CONtEMPLO is an immersive art space in the chapel at Dos Búhos: video, light, installation and virtual reality, made for one room and seen a few people at a time. It is curated by Melanie Harris de Maycotte, who leads events and community at the winery, and it describes itself as a place to experience life from another perspective.

Since 2021 the chapel has shown El Bosque by Victor Zapatero, Ápeiron by Daniela Edburg and Iván Puig, virtual-reality work by Yuliya Lanina and, in 2026, Small Acts of Light. The CONTEMPLAMOS residency brings artists to live and work among the vines; past residents include Yuliya Lanina, Julia Barbosa Landois, Mauricio Cervantes and Steve Nyktas.

En la Oscuridad is a wine tasting in complete darkness: an hour, eight guests at most, the other senses doing the work. Fifteen percent of each ticket goes to a Guanajuato association for people with visual disabilities.

What they've written

Probably one of the best wineries in Mexico. While Valle de Guadalupe is the country's most acclaimed wine region, Dos Búhos sits in relatively unknown San Miguel de Allende, at 2,000 metres, farming sustainably and making wine with minimal intervention.

ROBERT VERNICK · WINE TERROIR

Some say San Miguel de Allende has some of the best soil for the vine in the whole country. This winery is the proof.

ALEJANDRA NARANJO · FOOD & WINE

Dos Búhos is a dream and a collective journey: what began as a restlessness to create something tangible, unique and lasting opened the doors to this fascinating labyrinth of creativity, passion and diversity.

ARTURO BODENSTEDT · GUÍA DE VINOS MEXICANOS

"...a converted barn beside an iconically handsome white 1940s-era hacienda."

GARDEN & GUN

"Dos Búhos — which means 'two owls,' a nod to the feathered residents that nest near the on-site chapel."

TRAVEL + LEISURE

"...one of the few wineries in the country with certified organic grapes."

FOOD & WINE EN ESPAÑOL · 2024

"Bodega Dos Búhos... vinifies organic grapes and ferments with wild yeast."

WINE ENTHUSIAST · 2024

"Dos Búhos is a wonderful place to visit as well."
